

DRAFTING A SECURITY COUNCIL RESOLUTION

I. TITLE

The title of your resolution states the topic/issue you are addressing. There are typically two forms for Security Council Resolution titles. Those that address a specific topic (example below) and those that address a specific "situation" or global conflict (ex. "The Situation in Somalia"). Please visit this link to see the different styles of Security Council Resolution titles.

Minimization of the Quantity of Nuclear Weapons

The Security Council,

II. PREAMBULATORY CLAUSES

The preamble (introduction) of your resolution is made up of preambulatory (introductory) clauses – as many as you find necessary. In these preambulatory clauses, you provide the reasons why you are addressing your issue and highlight past international action on the issue. To have a strong Security Council Resolution it is important to have in-depth research in these preambulatory clauses. For real Security Council examples, visit this link.

Each preambulatory clause begins with a preambulatory phrase (see list in box on right) and ends with a comma.

There are 5 types of preambulatory clauses. Your resolution should include all applicable types of clauses (as many of each type as you find necessary), organized in whatever order works best for your issue:

5 Types of Preambulatory Clauses

1. General Statements and Background Information on why your issue is important and its impact:

Convinced that the use of nuclear weapons poses the most serious threat to the survival of mankind,

2. Citations (Mentions) of past UN Resolutions, Treaties, or Conventions related to your topic/issue, especially those that your country has supported in the past:

Recalling that the use of nuclear weapons would constitute a crime against humanity, as declared in its resolutions 33/71*, 34/83, 35/152, and 36/92,

* General Assembly resolutions are cited as Session # / Resolution # - the citation 33/71 would mean Resolution 71 during the 33rd Session of the UN. An online library of all UN Resolutions is available here. Begin your search with Symbol: A/RES and topic-related words in "Word(s) in the Title."

Ex. Symbol: A/RES, Word in the Title: Nuclear (General Assembly)

Ex. Symbol: S/RES, Word in the Title: Nuclear (Security Council)

* Security Council resolutions are cited as Resolution # (Year) – the citation 2612 (2021) would mean resolution 2612, published in 2021. A library of Security Council Resolutions is available here.

3. References to sections of the UN Charter, Declaration of Human Rights, or other International Laws/Frameworks related to your topic/issue, especially sections giving the Security Council the right to do what you are recommending:

Reaffirming that any use of nuclear weapons would be a violation of the Charter of the United Nations,

4. Recognition of the efforts of nations and regional or non-governmental organizations in addressing your topic/issue, especially other nations you wish to support your resolution:

Conscious that steps taken by the Russian Federation and the United States of America towards reducing their nuclear weapons can contribute towards the goal of the complete elimination of nuclear weapons,

5. Quotes and Statements made by the UN Secretary General or a UN body or agency relevant to your topic/issue:

Bearing in mind the advisory opinion of the International Court of Justice of July 8th, 1996 on the legality of the threat or use of nuclear weapons,

III. OPERATIVE CLAUSES

The final section of your resolution is made up of operative (action-based) clauses – as many as you find necessary. Operative clauses provide your solutions to the issue your resolution addresses. Each clause should provide only one specific action/idea, and work together with the other operative clauses to build your full solution. For real Security Council examples, visit this link.

Each operative clause is numbered (1., 2., etc.), begins with an operative phrase (see list in box on right), and ends with a semi-colon. Only the FINAL operative clause should end with a period to signify the end of your resolution.

REMEMBER: Unlike bills passed by the UN General Assembly, the actions/ideas in your resolution are binding towards member nations. This means that nations are “bound” (required) to follow them if your resolution is passed. Thus, it is important to include enforcement mechanisms in Security Council resolutions where one might not for General Assembly Resolutions.

The strongest operative clauses are those that provide clear details and specifics on the action/idea you are recommending, including:

- Who should take action (Governments, the UN, UN Agencies, or NGOs)
- What actions they should take
- Where and/or when the actions should take place
- How to best take action

Example:

1. Calls Upon all UN member states along with the UN Conference on Disarmament to commence negotiations in order to reach agreement on an international convention prohibiting the use or threat of use of nuclear weapons under any circumstances;

2. Requests that each member state agree to at least a 50% reduction of nuclear weapons by 2026.

Types of Operative Clauses

Operative Clauses are much more varied than preambulatory clauses because they depend on the idea/action you are recommending.

When creating operative clauses, the best guidelines to use are the powers given to the UN Security Council by the UN Charter. For Security Council resolutions, the Security Council has the power to:

- Determine the existence of a threat to the peace or act of aggression
- Call upon the parties to a dispute to settle it by peaceful means and recommends methods of adjustment or terms of settlement.
- In some cases, the Security Council can resort to imposing sanctions or even authorize the use of force to maintain or restore international peace and security.
- Under the UN Charter, all Member States are obligated to comply with Security Council decisions.
